St. Andrew's, the famous University town of Scotland on the shores of St. Andrew's Bay, West Fifeshire, is a town of considerable antiquity, the See of St. Andrews being founded in the eighth century. There are many objects of interest, notably the Cathedral (thirteenth century), the Castle (A D. 1200), and the University, the latter being a collection of modern buildings, though the College itself, the oldest in Scotland, dates from 1411.
